Enterprise Agreement | Fictional Demonstration Copy

Agreement Reference	AIA-HR-EMP-2026-227
Effective Date	21 October 2026
Parties	Apex Industrial Automation Ltd. (Company) and Rohan Mehta (Employee)

BACKGROUND AND COMMERCIAL PURPOSE

This fictional agreement records proposed commercial terms for the parties identified above. It is designed to resemble a professional industrial contract and to test automated clause extraction, risk detection, evidence reporting, and deterministic scoring. The wording is synthetic and is not a recommendation for use in a real transaction.

AGREED TERMS

Appointment

The Company appoints Employee as Senior Systems Engineer. Employee shall perform duties related to the role and safeguard Company information.

Compensation and Deductions

The Company may deduct amounts it considers appropriate from salary, incentives, reimbursements, or final settlement for alleged losses, equipment damage, training costs, or policy violations without prior written consent or a final determination.

Personal Devices and Accounts

At any time and without prior notice, the Company may inspect, copy, monitor, or require access to Employee's personal phone, laptop, private email, messaging accounts, photographs, and other private accounts.

Non-Competition

For five (5) years after employment ends, Employee shall not work for, advise, invest in, or provide services to any competing business anywhere in the world, regardless of role.

Non-Solicitation

For four (4) years after termination, Employee shall not hire Company employees, work with Company customers, or respond to public job advertisements or public customer requests involving a Company contact.

Continuing Obligations

All confidentiality, non-disclosure, and non-disparagement obligations continue permanently, including for information that becomes public or is independently developed.

Notice and Separation

Employee must provide one hundred eighty (180) days' written notice before resigning. The Company may end employment immediately without advance notice or a cure period.
